2017 Brings 92nd Session of the South Dakota Legislature

Tuesday, January 10th, the 92nd Session of the South Dakota Legislature kicks off. Governor Dennis Daugaard will present his State of the State Address that day. It will be followed on Wednesday, the 11th, by the State of the Judiciary Address and by the State of the Tribes Address on the 12th.

The composition of our legislature during the 92nd session will be a super majority of Republicans in both houses. The Senate will have 29 seats filled by Republicans and 6 seats filled by Democrats. The House of Representatives will have 60 seats filled by Republicans and 10 filled by Democrats. There are no Independents filling seats in either house.

Session is scheduled to be 38 days long. The final day, reserved for consideration of any gubernatorial vetoes, is March 27th.

To follow the 92nd Session of the South Dakota Legislature, the SD Legislative Research Council (LRC) has an excellent website available. At <http://sdlegislature.gov> you will find links to bills under consideration, committee schedules and hearings, floor sessions, mailing and email lists for all legislators and a whole lot more.

We encourage you to become familiar with this site and utilize it to follow the work being done. The decisions made in Pierre impact the lives of all South Dakotans. It is important that all citizens are watchful and speak out on issues of importance to them.

In addition, various groups within the state track legislative activity and make this information available. They also offer assistance to those seeking to be involved who may have questions about how to best do so. We encourage you to utilize these resources e.g., SD Advocacy Services, SD Parent Connection, the Coalition, League of Women Voters.

Finally, prior to and throughout the legislative session communities statewide hold a variety of opportunities to meet with and hear from your local legislators about the work being done in Pierre. Cracker barrels, coffees and more are hosted by a variety of organizations. Watch local media outlets to learn about the opportunities in your community and participate!

Cooperative Disability Investigations (CDI)

The Cooperative Disability Investigations (CDI) Program continues to be one of our most successful initiatives, contributing to the integrity of SSA's disability programs.

SSA and OIG (Office of Inspector General) jointly established the CDI Program in Fiscal Year 1998, in conjunction with State Disability Determination Services (DDS) and State or local law enforcement agencies, to effectively pool resources and expertise and prevent fraud in SSA's disability programs. The Units investigate disability claims under SSA's Title II and Title XVI programs that State disability examiners believe are suspicious. The CDI program's primary mission is to obtain evidence that can resolve questions of fraud before benefits are ever paid. CDI Units also provide reports to DDS examiners during continuing disability reviews (CDRs) that can be used to cease benefits of in-payment beneficiaries.

In FY1998, the CDI Program launched with single Units in five states. The program currently consists of 38 Units covering 33 states, the District of Columbia, and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico. In FY2016, the CDI Program reported $268 million in projected savings to SSA's disability programs. Since the program was established, through September 2016, the CDI efforts have resulted in $3.5 billion in projected savings to SSA's disability programs and $2.4 billion in projected savings to non-SSA programs.

Each CDI Unit comprises an OIG Special Agent who serves as the Team Leader, employees from that State's DDS and an SSA employee who act as programmatic experts, and State or local law enforcement officers. Tapping the skills of each member, the CDI Units receive benefit applications identified as suspicious by the DDS and, where appropriate, investigate these claims.

The process typically begins with a fraud referral from DDS or SSA to the CDI Unit. We also receive fraud referrals from SSA's Office of Disability Adjudication and Review, private citizens, anonymous sources, and other law enforcement agencies. Disability fraud can involve malingering, filing multiple applications, concealing work or other activities, and exaggerating or lying about disabilities.

The CDI Unit Team Leader screens the referral and if it's accepted as a case, the Team Leader will work with the State or local law enforcement members of the team to investigate the allegation, either by interviewing the applicant and third parties and/or conducting surveillance of the applicant.

Upon completion of the investigation, a report detailing the investigation is sent to the DDS, where DDS staff serves as the ultimate decision-making entity in determining whether a person is eligible to receive a monthly disability benefit payment. If the claimant is already receiving benefits, DDS and/or SSA will determine whether the person's benefits should be continued or terminated. There is even, in some cases, the possibility of criminal prosecution or the imposition of civil monetary penalties or administrative sanctions.

CDI Recently Established in South Dakota

In reviewing the summary of the Governor's FY2018 Recommended Budget, we noted the CDI mentioned under the Department of Human Services, Division of Rehabilitation Services and the Attorney General's Office. A CDI has recently been established in South Dakota, but it is not fully staffed at this time.

Executive Director Notes...

A new year is starting, and with it comes a new administration in Washington D.C. Now you only have to spend a few minutes on your favorite social media site to get the feeling that even though the election is over, the conversations that caused me to drop off of Facebook for 100 days prior to the election - continues.

I don't regret taking a break for 100 days. I had read a lot "on" issues and candidates. I had read a lot "from" candidates. I had listened to voices that affirmed my beliefs and values. I had also made myself listen to the voices of others, who said they shared my beliefs and values, yet the words they were saying felt uncomfortable, even hurtful. I couldn't think of anything that was going to sway me, so I took a break.

It helped put a host of things in perspective, including the importance and role of social media in my life. It caused me to be still and be certain of what I was thinking, feeling and needing to do. It's good to step back from daily patterns and gain some new perspective. And since the conversations don't seem to be changing much, a part of me wants to take another break from it all. Yet I know that this would be the wrong thing for me to do now!

There is much fear, anger and despair being voiced in these days and weeks following the election. At the same time, there is much joy, celebration and anticipation being voiced by others. It happens after every election. But something is different this time. This most recent election was one very different from others I've seen in our lifetime. And I sense the effects will be with us for quite some time!

So what do we do now? Well, it's time to move forward! No amount of replaying what happened, restating who said what, or placing blame on someone for what did or didn't happen is not going to accomplish anything. It's time to get to work, however we feel about the outcome.

For those who are feeling anger, despair and fear, it's a time to be "watchful and to act" when decisions are being considered which will impact your lives. These decisions happen at every level. Talk with your local, state and national leaders. Tell them what is important to you and why. Offer to work with them to find solutions that work for all people, not just a portion of the people. Email them, call them, write them - communicate! To say nothing is communicating - unfortunately, silence is often heard as support rather than opposition.

For those who are feeling joyful, celebratory and anticipatory for the change you've been waiting for - remember that all are impacted by the change, and others may not see the change in the same way that you do. Work for change in a way that does not leave others out of the process or totally out of the picture. Invite them to be a part of the process, listen to their concerns. Again, work with them to find solutions that work for all people, not just a portion of the people.

So as I prepare for this new year and the work ahead of us, I've found two quotes that I'll be keeping in front of me - "To make democracy work, we must be a nation of participants, not observers." and "Democracy demands trust. It demands that sense of mutual understanding. You've got to give - as much as you take."

I thank you for the past opportunities to work with you. I look forward with hope to new opportunities that await us. Here's to our working together to ensure that all people have a right to full access and inclusion in every aspect of community life and the right to act on their own behalf, direct their own interests and make decisions and take risks based on their goals and values. Forward we go!

Shelly

President's Thoughts...

Greetings Members and Friends,

I want to introduce myself. I'm Tom Kober, and I am your new President of SD Coalition's Board of Directors. I was elected to this position at our previous board meeting. I am looking forward to working with you to accomplish our mission in the year ahead.

I hope that you have great holidays with your families. It is so nice to be with families and to spend time together in joy and love. May we cherish every moment we share with friends and family.

With the new year of 2017, we are looking forward to an exciting year of activities.

As an advocate of our disability community, which I am part of it, we need to look carefully at current events to see if we need to revamp our advocacy efforts to maintain the rights of our community. Why am I saying this? Look at the political and economic climates of today. Things will be changing in the future – the changes may or may not impact our rights. We'll only know if we keep watching.

As an organization, we must keep watching those changes to make sure that our mission continues to move forward and gains that have been made are not lost. We also must work to ensure that our efforts are what our membership wants our work to be. We will be monitoring the SD Legislature to make sure our rights are protected and preserved; same goes at the national level. With Congress and the Presidency being run by one political party, it is even more important to watch closely.

Once you've read this newsletter, you'll know we're into a fundraising mode to support our organization. We're having a great raffle of an ATV (see page 3 for more info). Please support our efforts by purchasing a chance to win and by asking others to do the same.

Also, please talk or share with your friends, neighbors, coworkers and even strangers the Coalition's mission to protect and preserve the rights of people with disabilities. Invite them, recruit them to join our organization. The more members, the merrier, and the greater our reach and impact when we advocate for what is right. Thanks.

Lastly, I want to assure you that we are here to support you, as you work to reach your goals. But we can't do this without your SUPPORT and INVOLVEMENT in the organization.

Let's get the ball rolling now to accomplish a new era of progress kicked off in 2017.

Tom

Website Accessibility for People with Disabilities

In early December we were notified by our webhosting service that "In recent news, we have learned that some South Dakota businesses have been targeted by out-of-state law firms regarding discrimination towards individuals with disabilities."

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) states that businesses cannot discriminate against individuals with disabilities. Having equal access to websites is one piece of the picture covered by the ADA.

If you wish to independently look at your website and evaluate its accessibility, one site that can assist you is:

wave.webaim.org

If you are working with a webhosting company, they also may be able to assist you, but there may be a charge for their services. Another resource for technical assistance in this area is South Dakota's assistive technology project - DakotaLink.

Crime Against Persons with Disabilities

2009 - 2014 Statistical Tables

In 2014, the rate of violent victimization against persons with disabilities (31.7 victimizations per 1,000 persons age 12 or older) was 2.5 times higher than the age-adjusted rate for persons without disabilities (12.5 per 1,000). Every year between 2009 and 2014, the rate of violent victimization against people with disabilities was at least twice that for persons without disabilities. After an increase in the rate of violent victimization for both persons with and without disabilities between 2011 and 2012, the rate remained steady through 2014.

Governor's Recommended FY2018 Budget

Governor Dennis Daugaard presented his FY2018 Recommended Budget to our Legislators on Tuesday, December 6th, in Pierre. He is recommending a budget totaling $4,611,179,100 and 13,862.0 FTE. This represents an overall decrease of $54,926,796 in total funds and a decrease of 1.4 FTE over the revised FY2017 budget.

- 35.5% is for Health, Human and Social Services
- 34.7% is for State Aid for Education
- 13.1% is for Higher Education
- 6.1% is for Corrections
- 4.5% is for the Legislature, Unified Judicial System, Public Utilities Commission and Elected Officials
- 1.3% is for Agriculture, Environment and Natural Resources; and Game, Fish & Parks; and
- 4.8% is for the Remainder of State Government.

A few of the Governor's recommendations are a 1.0% inflationary increase to target teacher salary, 1.0% increase for postsecondary technical institutes, 1.0% pay increase for all permanent state employees and a 1.0% inflationary increase for providers.

The Governor has also recommended an increase in general funds to increase instructor salaries at the South Dakota School for the Blind and Visually Impaired and the South Dakota School for the Deaf, as these teachers are similar to K-12 teachers who received an increase as part of the 2017 legislation to improve teacher salaries.

Another recommendation is an additional 2.0 FTE for the SD School for the Deaf related to outreach expansion.

In his December 2nd Governor's Column, he shared that sales tax revenue numbers have been weak. He stated, "We won't have much to support spending increases or take on new expensive projects. This will be a year to focus on our priority areas and maintain our commitments. I do not anticipate a need to make cuts." His budget address and recommended budget seem to fall in line with those comments.

To read more on the Governor's Recommended Budget, go to <https://bfm.sd.gov> "State Budget" followed by "Governor Daugaard". You will find several items relating to his budget address and FY2018 Recommended Budget.

An Opportunity to Make A Difference

Each year vacancies occur on various boards and councils that have an impact on services and supports available for people with disabilities in South Dakota. Two of those which are due to have vacancies as of July 2017 are the Statewide Independent Living Council and the Board of Vocational Rehabilitation.

To learn more about both groups go to:

<https://boardsandcommissions.sd.gov>

and search for "Independent Living Council" or "Board of Vocational Rehabilitation. You may contact SILC staff at shellyp@sd-ccd.org or BVR staff at colettew@sd-ccd.org.

If you wish to submit a nomination for yourself or someone else, please go to:

<https://dhs.sd.gov/rehabservices>

then click on "Boards and Councils" and you will find information telling you more about the nomination process. This information references last year's process. The process does not vary much from year to year, and the nomination form remains consistent and may be submitted at any time.

Oregon Launches ABLE Program

The State of Oregon has launched its "Oregon ABLE Savings Plan" (which caters specifically to Oregon residents) and its "ABLE for ALL Savings Plan" (which is open to all qualified ABLE beneficiaries nationwide). Both of Oregon's ABLE plans allow individuals with disabilities to save up to $14,000 a year in an ABLE account without jeopardizing their eligibility for federally-funded, means tested benefits, such as Supplemental Security Income (SSI) and Medicaid. The funds in the account can be used for disability-related expenses that assist the beneficiary in increasing and/or maintaining his or her health, independence or quality of life.

Not unlike other ABLE programs across the country, the Oregon ABLE plans focus efforts to ensure minimal costs associated with establishing and maintaining an ABLE account (which can be done online.) The Oregon ABLE Savings Plan has an annual account fee of $45 ($3.75/month), however this will be reduced to $22.50 for all Oregon residents who open their account before December 31st, 2017. The ABLE for ALL Savings Plan (open to residents of all states) has an annual account fee of $55 ($4.59/month). Under both plans the total annual asset-based fees vary depending on the investment selections held within an account, but do not exceed 0.38%.

It is important to note that if the contributor is a resident of Oregon, contributions made into the Oregon ABLE Savings Plan are eligible to receive a state income tax deduction of up to $4,620 for joint filers and $2,310 for individuals. This state income tax deduction can only be taken advantage of if the ABLE beneficiary is under the age of 21.

The Oregon ABLE Savings Plan, ABLE for ALL, MiABLE, ENABLE, ABLE TN, Ohio STABLE Account, and ABLE United programs are currently the only programs enrolling beneficiaries in the country, and they are doing so primarily via their online portals. We are also expecting a couple more states, including the State of Virginia, to be launching their ABLE account programs by the end of the year.

For more information on both of Oregon's ABLE plans, please visit <http://oregonablesavings.com/>

It's Not Always Easy to be Proud of Your Disability

By Jessica McHale - AAPD Blog

December 8, 2016 — "It's not always easy to be proud of your disability. There will be days when you wish you could take a cure-all blue pill. And there will be days when you can't imagine ever wanting to take that blue pill because you are so proud of your disability and who it has turned you into." Michael Murray, AAPD's COO.

Just last month you could have caught my lying on my floor gasping for air in between sobs. I was in a state of panic, caught by the spontaneity of yet another migraine and unsure of what to do. I've tried every medicine and every diet. I couldn't bear from physical pain as well as emotional exasperation, to even look at a digital screen or to listen to my mom give me instructions over the phone. I desperately wanted to go to a hospital and have them stop the pain, but I knew from my past experiences that all they could do was put me in a room and try various cocktails of disorienting drugs before finding something that would only work for a few hours, or conceding that nothing would.

I was going through perhaps the worst migraine of my entire life, and all I could think about was the entrapment I felt because of my condition in high school. Imagine having a jackhammer drilled into all sides of your skull, coupled with an all-consuming fear of missing extended time from school if your illness were to persist that upcoming semester. Meanwhile, a person could look at me at various stages during the attack and not even be able to tell that anything was wrong.

There is a stigma behind these kinds of "invisible" disabilities. If there aren't consistent tangible visible signs, if a doctor can't point to a structure and say "that's the cause, right there!" then surely it can't be that bad. I get migraines almost every day, and I've had to build up the strength to learn how to put up a monotonous front in the midst of suffering from one. Still, it often feels like I'm punished for developing that strength. I've had good friends assure me that "it's just a headache" and that "it's all in my head." Teachers and administrators have called me lazy and hopeless, threatening to fail me without the slightest consideration that this whole thing might not be under my control.

And it isn't always under my control, but through my condition I've learned to better control other aspects of my own life. After my high school decided to fill my transcript with F's rather than allowing me time to make up my work, I applied to nearly 20 colleges and sent personalized letters to all of them from my doctors, teachers, and mentors explaining my circumstances. While I experienced one ADA violation after another, I never lost sight of my own potential and self-concept, though my guidance counselor and some of my teachers did all they could to break it down. I got into a top 10 undergraduate program for my major, now earning better grades than I ever could have dreamt of. I've made time to volunteer, work, teach, mentor, and I'm even starting a moot court team at my university. I constantly plan for the worst-case scenario because I've envisioned it so many times. Cramming is not an option, and neither is giving anything but 100% of my effort. I've felt what it's like to lose what others take for granted, yet I also remain aware of the tremendous privilege and opportunities I have that others are not given.

This is the reality of living with a fickle disability. I live my life in ebbs and flows, and I'm working on embracing every aspect of my condition, because I swear I would not be the person I'm proud to be today without it. So I refer back to Michael Murray's quote at the beginning: although it may be immensely difficult at times, I would never take that blue pill.

Jessica McHale was a 2016 AAPD Summer Intern. She is currently a student at American University majoring in International Studies with a concentration in Justice, Ethics, and Human Rights.

Staff Earns Certification to Present National Program on Healthy Dating

DATE SAFE PROJECT - January 9th, 2017

Greenfield, WI: Shelly Pfaff and Colette Wagoner are now licensed to present the "Can I Kiss You?" program to middle school and high school students - after attending a two-day training seminar from November 29th to the 30th. This training, hosted by the President and Founder of the Date Safe Project, Mike Domitrz, and the South Dakota Network Against Family Violence and Sexual Assault, enables Colette and Shelly to present this internationally renowned educational program in all local middle and high schools.

The "Can I Kiss You?" educational program is evidence based. A third-party research firm conducted a study showing the "Can I Kiss You?" program produces results that are statistically significant. All constructs were researched based and were found to have strong content and construct validity and high internal and external reliability.

The program is known around the country for helping schools:

- Reduce sexual violence among teens by giving all genders "How-to" skills for making better choices with intimacy, relationships, and respecting boundaries.
- Increase the number of teens who intervene to stop alcohol-facilitated sexual assaults at parties and events.
- Teach teens how to better support classmates and loved ones who may be survivors of sexual assault.
- Slow down the speed at which teenagers often engage in unhealthy relationships and intimacy.

Colette and Shelly are passionate advocates excited to inspire teens in our local schools on the important tools needed for healthy dating, relationships, respecting boundaries, and supporting survivors. By learning directly from the creator of the program, Mike Domitrz, Shelly and Colette have gained unique and effective skills for connecting with teenagers on issues most adults and educators struggle with sharing with middle school and high school students.

MIND & MEMORY MATTERS

Early Identification of Dementia in Individuals with Intellectual or Developmental Disabilities
(Excerpt from a product of Wisconsin Board for People with Developmental Disabilities)

In the United States, 6% of adults with I/DD will be affected by some form of dementia after the age of 60. For adults with Down syndrome, studies show that 50-70% will be affected by dementia by the age of 60. The NTG-EDSD (National Task Group-Early Detection Screen for Dementia) was created because the typical screening and evaluation tools used with the general population, involving complicated memory tests may not be feasible for people with I/DD. With early identification, there is potential to proactively address signs, delay symptoms and identify potentially treatable conditions that are causing symptoms.

This instrument can be used annually or as needed with adults with Down syndrome beginning at age 40, and with other at-risk people with I/DD when suspected of experiencing cognitive change.

We Can't Breathe: The Deaf & Disabled Margin of Police Brutality Project

Throughout history, Deaf and Disabled people have been criminalized for their mere existence. The relationship between Deaf and Disabled people and the U.S. criminal and medical system begins with filthy institutions, isolation, experiments, pity, and murder. Over the years, Deaf and Disabled people have fought to transform their public image, receive human recognition, and gain access to civil rights such as public transportation, education, safety, and employment. In furtherance of this fight, Deaf and Disabled people have created a culture based on philosophies such as "No Pity," "Nothing About Us, Without Us," and "Independent Living."

Even with much progress, Deaf and Disabled people are still largely being institutionalized in nursing homes, mental health facilities, and jails/prisons. Additionally, people with disabilities, particularly those who also live on the margins of race and gender identity, are far more likely to face police brutality. Despite the disproportionate ways in which the U.S. legal system affects Deaf and Disabled people, very few disability organizations create policy or direct substantive advocacy toward these issues.

"We Can't Breathe: The Deaf & Disabled Margin of Police Brutality Project" includes a video and toolkit that can be utilized for educational training for disability organizations and agencies. To learn more about it, go to <http://www.ncil.org> and look for the "We Can't Breathe... Project."
